Message from David Haggerty, International Tennis Federation President

On behalf of the ITF it is my great pleasure to welcome you to the 2023 NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters and ITF Wheelchair Doubles Masters at the Emilio Sanchez Academy in Barcelona.

The world's eight highest-ranked men's, women's and quad singles players have the opportunity to compete for the coveted NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters titles.

Meanwhile, with the top eight men's, top six women's and top four quad doubles pairings competing for the prestigious ITF Wheelchair Doubles Masters titles, 39 of the world's leading wheelchair players across singles and doubles disciplines are set to contest the year-end championships, which are being held in Spain for the very first time.

I would like to thank NEC for their exceptional support of wheelchair tennis in this, the 30th year as title sponsor of the Singles Masters.

I would also like to thank UNI-QLO, title sponsor of the ITF's Wheelchair Tennis Tour since 2014, as the sport continues to reach ever-greater heights.

This year's championships would not be possible without the dedication of the many people behind the scenes, including those at the Catalan Tennis Federation, local sponsors, and all the staff and volunteers at the Emilio Sanchez Academy. I am sure that their hard work will ensure the continued success of both events.

All that remains for me is to wish everyone an enjoyable and memorable week.

Message from Takayuki Morita NEC Corporation President & CEO

Welcome to the 2023 NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters.

Over the past several decades, wheelchair tennis has evolved and grown so popular that it is now recognized as a professional sport. The NEC Group is tremendously proud to have supported the development of wheelchair tennis since its inception.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate each athlete competing in this tournament and express my sincere respect for the tireless efforts that brought you here. I look forward to seeing everyone demonstrate their full potential and excellent athletic abilities through matches that will bring excitement and inspiration to us all.

In line with the NEC Group's Purpose to "create the social values of safety, security, equality, and efficiency and to realize a sustainable society where everyone has the chance to reach their full potential," NEC's continuing support of wheelchair tennis further contributes to the creation of inclusive and diversified environments.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to the International Tennis Federation and all the organizations and individuals who helped make this event a reality.

I wish you all the best of luck and hope your week in Barcelona will be a very exciting one.

Yours sincerely,

Takayuki Morita

Message from Miguel Díaz, Royal Spanish Tennis Federation President

It is an immense honor that the most important competition of wheelchair tennis will be played in Spain, more specifically in Barcelona.

For a few days, the city will become the world capital of this sport. Wheelchair tennis has become a giant that attracts more and more fans.

The great players on the circuit are stars who are gradually achieving the recognition they deserve.

I invite tennis fans to come and watch a tennis match and they will soon realize that we are talking about elite athletes who are capable of long and beautiful exchanges. The way they run with their chair, the changes of pace, and the strength of their strokes, make them heroes of our time.

Today we are very fortunate to have Martin de la Puente at the top, who I'm sure will do a great tournament.

I do not want to forget Dani Caverzaschi who will surely be back with the best very soon.

Finally, we would like to thank the Catalan Tennis Federation (FCT) and its president, Jordi Tamayo, and the Emilio Sanchez Academy, for the effort they make to organise this competition of which we can be very proud.

Royal Spanish Tennis Federation

Message from Jordi Tamayo, Catalan Tennis Federation President

The Catalan Tennis Federation is very proud to be able to host, in the magnificent facilities of the Emilio Sánchez Academy, the NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters 2023 and the ITF Wheelchair Doubles Masters 2023.

From the Board of Directors of the Federation, which I have the honor to chair, we are firmly committed from day one to the promotion of tennis at all social levels and places in the Catalan territory, with special sensitivity to groups of people with disabilities and people at risk of social exclusion.

This commitment is fully consolidated through the Catalan Tennis Foundation, which executes the strategic lines of the project: wheelchair tennis, blind tennis, tennis for people with intellectual disabilities, tennis and special educational needs, tennis and mental health as well as tennis in prisons.

With the organization of the NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters and the ITF Wheelchair Doubles Masters 2023, we have the opportunity to enjoy locally not only a great sport event, but the best tournament in the world in wheelchair tennis, where the presence of the best players in the world is guaranteed, which undoubtedly values the strength of tennis as an inclusive tool.

Catalonia is one of the great Spanish engines of wheelchair tennis. Now, thanks to the organization of the Masters, the ITF 1 Tram Barcelona Open and the ITF 1 Catalonia Open organised jointly by the Catalan Tennis Federation and the Emilio Sánchez Academy, Catalan Tennis also becomes one of the great references of wheelchair tennis at an international level.

All this wouldn't have been possible without the collaboration of the Emilio Sánchez Academy and the support of the different institutions.

I would like to end by encouraging all Catalan Tennis to visit these days the Emilio Sánchez Academy and that they can enjoy one of the great events of tennis at an international level.

Jordi Tamayo

Catalan Tennis Federation

Message from Emilio Sánchez, Emilio Sánchez Academy CEO & Co-Founder

The Secret of Spanish Tennis

The secret of Spanish tennis is in the clubs, which are the true production and renewal machines of our tennis.

Many times, they may feel alone in the middle of the desert, but they always find a way to contribute their grain of sand to the development of this sport. They are the first to invest in their schools, hiring qualified technicians and dedicating hours on the court to their kids. In addition, they organize tournaments, and some, like the Emilio Sánchez Academy, also set up international level Challengers that are the ones that help the Nadals, Almagros... of the future take off in their careers. In this case, together with the Catalan Tennis Federation and the Emilio Sánchez Foundation we have organized an ITF1 and the Masters. That has no price or reward. This is love for sport.

My most sincere congratulations to the teams of both institutions. You have already been doing Challenger Wheelchair for 3 years and many other minor tournaments. You have managed to see the light after so much effort.

I hope you can continue growing and achieve your goals, you deserve it.

SINGLE MASTERS PREVIEW

The NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters is unique on the UNIQLLO Wheelchair Tennis Tour and guarantees that the world's eight best men's, women's and quad players must face three of their peers in round-robin competition before the top two players in each of two round-robin groups go forward to the knock-out semi-finals.

It's not unusual for the year-end world No.1 rankings to be decided at the season-ending championships and that will be the case again in the men's singles this year, with Tokito Oda and Alfie Hewett both in contention to end the year as world No. 1 for the first time.

MEN

Twelve months on from Oda making history at the Singles Masters, when the then 16-year-old beat Hewett in the men's final to succeed the Briton as the youngest winner of the title and deny Hewett the ranking points that would have kept him at world No.1, Oda arrives in Barcelona after another record-breaking season during which he's set more records as the youngest men's champion at both Roland Garros and Wimbledon.

Hewett and Oda have won two Grand Slam and two Super Series titles apiece this year, but whereas Hewett's two Grand Slam titles have come on the hard courts in Australia and the USA, Oda's performance on the clay at Roland Garros will likely be a source of confidence going into the first Singles Masters to be held on clay in the event's history.

World No.3 Gustavo Fernandez will surely be another to enjoy the surface for this year's Masters as he seeks his first title at the year-end championships. The Argentinian is the only player other than Hewett and Oda to have won a Super Series title this season, while all three of his 2023 singles titles by the start of this month have come on clay.

After making his top 4 debut in July, Martin de la Puente is enjoying his best season to date, with the first two ITF 1 singles titles of his career including May's Tram Barcelona Open on clay, where he beat Hewett for the very first time. A similar performance as the Masters lands in Spain for the first time would surely be the dream finale for the home favourite.

Of the eight players in this year's men's line-up, Joachim Gerard, the winner of four Singles Masters titles between 2015 and 2019 and former finalist Gordon Reid could also both be challenging for semi-final berths. Takashi Sanada will hope to find the form that saw him take Oda to three sets in the final of the Japan Open, while Takuya Miki replaces Ruben Spaargaren in the men's singles entry and will contest his third successive Singles Masters.

WOMEN

Diede de Groot begins her bid for a sixth successive Singles Masters women's title after securing a third successive calendar Grand Slam.

Unbeaten in 122 matches, the defending champion's year-end No.1 ranking has long since been secured, but she began 2023 by being taken to three sets by world No. 2 Yui Kamiji in their first three singles finals of the year. Two close sets followed in the final of the Barcelona Open in May, but Kamiji hasn't come close to taking a set off De Groot in their two most recent finals.

It's ten years this year since Kamiji became the only non-Dutch player to win the women's title in 28 previous editions of the Singles Masters, a feat she achieved at the expense of runner-up Jiske Griffioen, who had actually beaten Kamiji in their round-robin group match earlier that week at the 2013 Singles Masters.

A decade later, Griffioen is now a three-time Masters champion herself and she looks likely to come into this year's Masters as the only player other than De Groot to have beaten Kamiji this season.

While De Groot, Griffioen and Kamiji head the challengers for a place in this year's semi-finals, 2014 Masters champion Aniek van Koot is an ever-present contender to progress beyond the round-robin stage.

Japan's Manami Tanaka makes her Masters debut at the end of a year that started with the world No. 7 reaching the Australian Open semi-finals, while Zhenzhen Zhu and Kgothatso Montjane will both bid to reach the semi-finals for the first time. Montjane came within two points of beating world No.1 De Groot on clay at the French Riviera Open in June.

Dana Mathewson will contest what could be her last Singles Masters, as she intends to retire after the Paris 2024 Paralympics.

QUADS

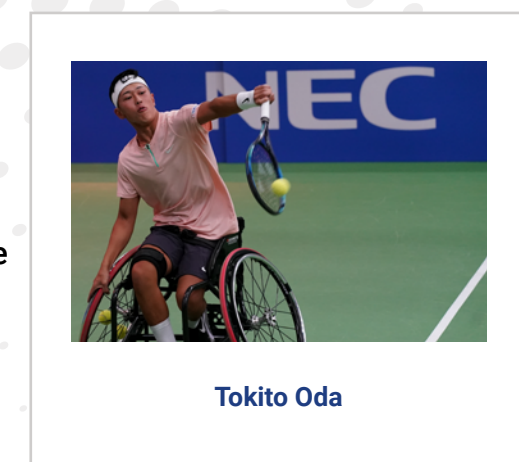

Niels Vink and Sam Schroder have dominated the 2023 season at the top of the quad singles rankings, winning two Grand Slam titles apiece, while Vink has won all five of this year's Super Series titles. Between them they have contested the last two quad finals at the Singles Masters, while Schroder denied Vink back-to-back Singles Masters titles last year and it will likely take a big performance from any of their six rivals to stop them from making it an all-Dutch final again.

Donald Ramphadi

Diede de Groot

World No.1 Vink's position at the top of the quad singles world rankings at the end of the year is secure. He is set to arrive in Barcelona having won 10 singles titles in 12 tournament this season. The only two tournaments he's not won have resulted in Schroder's Grand Slam titles at the Australian Open and the US Open.

While 2023 has largely consisted of Schroder finishing runner-up to Vink on multiple occasions, the season has also included losses to Heath Davidson in the Wimbledon semi-finals, to Masters debutant Guy Sasson in the quarter-finals of the French Riviera Open and to 11-time Singles Masters champion David Wagner in the final of the Seoul Korea Open. Davidson, Sasson and Wagner should all be live contenders for a place in this year's semi-finals, along with Schroder and Vink. Next to Vink's 10 titles, Sasson four titles this year include three on clay, including at the Barcelona Open.

Meanwhile, former Masters finalist Andy Lapthorne and Donald Ramphadi have both been Grand Slam semifinalists in 2023, while world No. 9 Robert Shaw will be keen to make the most of his second successive Singles Masters campaign after missing the chance to register a match win last year. The round-robin group matches should be an intriguing prospect.

DOUBLES MASTERS PREVIEW

The ITF Wheelchair Doubles Masters follows almost the same format as the NEC Wheelchair Singles Masters, with the top two partnerships after the round-robin matches progressing to the men's and women's doubles semi-finals, while the top two teams after the quad doubles round-robin qualify for the quad doubles final.

MEN'S DOUBLES

Twelve months ago, Martin de la Puente secured the year-end No. 1 doubles ranking after he partnered Gustavo Fernandez to win the men's Doubles Masters title and with the Masters being held in Spain for the first time, there is nothing that De la Puente would like more than to successfully defend the title in front his home crowd.

De la Puente and Fernandez are set to arrive in Barcelona having won two ITF 1 titles together this season, both on clay at the Belgian Open and the Swiss Open, while their best Grand Slam performance came when finishing runners-up to Alfie Hewett and Gordon Reid in two close sets in the Roland Garros final.

Already two-time Doubles

Masters champions together, Hewett and Reid have also beaten De la Puente and Fernandez in two Super Series finals in 2023, while the Brits have extended their Grand Slam record to 18 titles together. However, their bid for a second calendar Grand Slam came to an end at the US Open, where they were beaten in the semi-finals by eventual champions Stephane Houdet and Takashi Sanada.

Houdet and Sanada team up with different partners in Barcelona. Houdet resumes a highly successful partnership with fellow Frenchman Frederic Cattano that goes back more than 20 years, and which has brought one ITF 2 title this season, along with runners-up honours to De la Puente and Fernandez at the Swiss Open and to Dutch duo Tom Egberink and Ruben Spaargaren at the Sardinia Open. There are form lines aplenty among the eight men's doubles partnerships. With 2022 Doubles Masters finalists and reigning Sardinia Open champions Egberink and Spaargaren having been forced to withdraw from this year's event, Joachim Gerard and Maikel Scheffers, who lost out to Egberink and Spaargaren in the last four in Sardinia, are still likely to be strong contenders for a place in the last four.

Takuya Miki and Tokito Oda have made an impressive case for themselves in just three tournaments together after winning the Japan Open and reaching the finals of both Wimbledon and the US Open this year, while Australian Open semi-finalists Daisuke Arai and Sanada boost the Japanese challenge.

WOMEN'S DOUBLES

You have to go back to 2014 to find a championship-winning women's partnership at the Doubles Masters that does not include either Diede de Groot, Jiske Griffioen or Aniek van Koot. However, De Groot and Griffioen have never won the Doubles Masters title together.

They will attempt to do just that this year after pairing up together in June for their first tournament outside of World Team Cup competition. That was at the French Riviera Open, where they endured their only loss as a partnership, losing out in the final to Yui Kamiji and Kgothatso Montjane. Since then, De Groot and Griffioen have won three titles and are unbeaten in completed matches.

Kamiji and Montjane benefited from De Groot and Griffioen having to award a walkover ahead of the US Open final and the Japanese-South African partnership are now the owners of two Grand Slam titles after beating De Groot and Argentina's Maria Florenca Moreno in this year's Roland Garros final.

Kamiji and Montjane have built a flourishing doubles partnership that began on clay at the Barcelona Open in June 2022.

They've now won eight titles together, six of which have come on clay. The only tournament they've played together and not reached the final was 2022 Doubles Masters.

Of the other partnerships among this year's Doubles Masters entries, Kamiji and Montjane have twice beaten French duo Pauline Derouledé and Emmanuelle Morch this season, while also defeating Manami Tanaka and Zhenzhen Zhu in the final of the Open International de Royan.

Tanaka and Zhu have an admirable record as doubles partners. In 14 tournaments together since February 2022 they've only failed to reach the final on three occasions, winning nine titles at ITF 1 or ITF 2 level.

Derouledé and Morch won the first of three tournaments as a partnership earlier this year, while Van Koot and Lizzy de Greef, the second all-Dutch partnership, pair up in Barcelona for the very first time.

Dana Mathewson and Lucy Shuker's Belgian Open title in July was their second ITF 1 title of the year and with Mathewson likely playing the last

Masters of her career this year, she and Shuker will hope to improve on their two previous Doubles Masters semi-final appearances in 2017 and 2021 2021.

Martín De la Puente and Gustavo Fernández

Yui Kamiji and Kgothatso Montjane

QUAD DOUBLES

The four partnerships who will contend for a place in the quad doubles final have varying degrees of experience with their respective partners.

Dutch top seeds Sam Schroder and Nies Vink have enjoyed another dominant season and arrive in Barcelona having won nine titles and 25 of their 26 matches in all competition. However, the defending champions lost out to Andy Lapthorne and Donald Ramphadi in the Roland Garros semi-finals.

Lapthorne will end 2023 as he started it, pairing up with David Wagner. The Anglo-American duo have an impressive resume, having won the first of their six Grand Slam titles together at the 2014 Australian Open. However, their 2023 record to date has not been so successful and they lost all three of their early-season matches against 2022 Doubles Masters finalists Robert Shaw and Heath Davidson.

Winners of the career Grand Slam together, Lapthorne and Wagner undoubtedly have the experience to beat any of their opponents in the round-robin phase of the competition. Meanwhile, Davidson and Shaw approach the end of their second full season as a regular doubles partners having earned a place in all five Super Series finals alongside Schroder and Vink, their first Grand Slam final at Roland Garros and a trio of ITF 1 titles.

With just seven tournaments behind them as a partnership, Tomas Masaryk and Ymanitu Silva are the least experienced team contesting this year's ITF Doubles Masters as Masaryk makes his debut at the year-end championship. Nevertheless, they have already built a noteworthy bank of results, including winning their first four tournaments together.

Heath Davidson and Robert Shaw

Emilio Sánchez Vicario Foundation

The ITF Wheelchair FESV, more than a decade with a fixed appointment in the national and international calendar.

The ITF Wheelchair FESV Tournament was born in 2012 at Emilio Sánchez Academy to give opportunities to those Spanish tennis players for their qualification for the Paralympic Games. This tournament has been consolidated with the support of the Catalan Federation, it is the current Catalonia Open, thus joining the Madrid event (La Ciudad de la Raqueta) on the calendar.

The starting point. Wheelchair Tennis School in the National Hospital for Paraplegics in Toledo.

The Emilio Sánchez Vicario Foundation began its project at the National Hospital for Paraplegics in January 2012, creating a school to promote sport with wheelchair tennis for patients admitted to the hospital, as well as for external people suffering from spinal cord injuries. Between 50 and 60 patients a year participate in the school each season.

The resources, the competition, the opportunity.

Emilio Sánchez Vicario, aware of the positive values that sport in general and tennis in particular contribute to people's development, created the Foundation in 2010 to promote tennis among people with physical, intellectual or sensory disabilities, as well as people with limited economic resources.

We currently have schools in Barcelona, Madrid, Toledo and Sevilla, as well as the Casper Tour circuit to support grassroots tennis and which is a sports and social integration project, as it includes the organization of tennis schools to promote the sport and in parallel open schools in clubs for young players undergoing cancer treatment, in those cities where the Casper Circuit events are held.

AmplificArte, by the Princess of Girona Foundation with support from the Emilio Sánchez Vicario Foundation.

The first stop in Barcelona of the Talent Tour, under the Art House label of the Princess of Girona Foundation, was at the Emilio Sánchez Academy & American School, with the support of the Emilio Sánchez Vicario Foundation, and in which the young artists Teo and Riza delighted nearly 120 student-athletes.

The live performances are part of AmplificARTE, an educational project that uses music as a transversal discipline and "a tool to work on the personal development and emotional well-being of young people", while promoting musical culture in schools, social entities and other spaces.

Catalan Tennis Foundation

The Catalan Tennis Foundation's main objective is to encourage and promote tennis at all social levels and places in the Catalan territory, giving priority to groups of people with disabilities and people at risk of social exclusion.

The areas of work and specific projects with which the Foundation currently works are wheelchair tennis, blind tennis, tennis for people with intellectual disabilities, tennis and special educational needs at school age, tennis and mental health and tennis in prisons. In all cases, the methodology used is global and inclusive to adapt the tasks and activities to the aptitudes of the program practitioners.

The programmed activities are carried out by qualified technicians with many years of experience where the following contents are worked on:

- Familiarization with the sport of tennis
- Social relationship through the practice of tennis, the acquisition of habits of organization and planning of sports activity as a means of promoting the health and well-being of the practitioners.

- Learning the basics of tennis adapted to the possibilities of execution to acquire a minimum of autonomy in the practice of tennis.
- Participation in fun and recreational activities with an educational orientation.
- Participation in meetings with other players from different tennis schools.

It can be accessed by anyone who, according to their doctor, has stabilized all their physical sequelae and who wants to practice sports supervised by the various specialized technicians.
